Making its first appearance for the season in the Memorial Day parade Friday afternoon, the drum and bugle corps of 28 Boy Scout members of Troop 79 of Gettysburg had a busy day.

After marching in the procession here and executing special marching drills along the parade route under the direction of Scoutmaster William A. Weikert and Drum Major Bernard Hewitt, the scouts went to New Oxford to participate in the parade there at 6 p. m.

Later in the evening they enjoyed a Wiener roast on Pardee field. Weikert announced Friday the advancement of three troop members to posts as junior assistant scoutmasters. They are John Aughtinbaugh, Clyde Williams, Jr., and Ralph Stitler, Jr.

Lincoln At Gettysburg

Lincoln's Gettysburg Address was used as the theme for Memorial Day display advertisements by two Philadelphia department stores in The Philadelphia Inquirer on May 30.

Gimbel Brothers' full page was highlighted with an illustration of a young school pupil writing on a blackboard the opening words of Lincoln's Gettysburg Address: "Four score and seven years ago..."

Lit Brothers' half page was an engraving of a soldier with bared head half kneeling in the midst of white crosses. An American flag flies above. In bold type above that are the words: "That these dead shall not have died in vain..." Abraham Lincoln, Gettysburg, Penna.

DAUGHTER OF UNION GENERAL IS GUEST FRIDAY

There were no veterans of the Civil war on hand for Friday's Memorial Day exercises in the National Cemetery but a daughter of one of the Union commanders in the battle of Gettysburg was an honored guest on the rostrum.

Miss Emily B. Warren, Newport, R. I., daughter of Major General Gouverneur Kemble Warren whose statue stands on Little Round Top, came to Gettysburg to attend the annual services.

As a young girl, Miss Warren was in Gettysburg to help unveil the statue erected in honor of her father on the battlefield. She had been here last in 1929. Friday was her first Memorial Day in Gettysburg.

Earlier in the day she had visited Little Round Top and stood by the bronze likeness of her famous father.

Miss Warren, who served as a secretary to the head of the Civilian Defense director of Rhode Island during World War II said she had enjoyed her visit here, found the exercises at the cemetery impressive and was very appreciative of the invitation to attend which was accompanied with tickets for the rostrum seats which she and a friend from Baltimore used.

Four-Engine Eastern Air Liner Crashes; 53 Killed; Bodies Mutilated And Burned

Port Deposit, Md., May 31 (AP) — Grim investigators today pried together the burned and broken bodies strewn along a wooded hillside when a four-engine airliner suddenly plunged from 1,000 feet and killed all 53 aboard.

It was the worst disaster in the history of U. S. commercial aviation. Forty-nine passengers, one of them a babe in its mother's arms, and four crew members were aboard the Eastern Airlines DC-4 last night on a non-stop flight from Newark, N. J., to Miami, Fla.

Three eyewitnesses said the giant plane exploded in the air. Two said it turned on its back and dived to the ground.

Searchers today collected all but one of the mutilated bodies and re-

Gettysburg Leads Nation In Honoring Soldier Dead; Children Decorate Graves

School children, military organizations, Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts, more than 1,000 of them, marched past an estimated 5,000 persons Friday afternoon in 1947's edition of Gettysburg's annual Memorial Day parade.

The procession was described by a number of the spectators who jam-packed the sidewalks from Center square to the National Cemetery to view its passing as "one of the best parades in years."

Marshal LeRoy H. Winebrenner and aides David A. Tawney, Ralph Trimmer and Howard Williams, headed by a police car, led the procession. Following them was the color guard from Gettysburg high school, the Gettysburg high school band and the school children. A few minutes before the parade began the high school band led the school children—342 from the public schools, 142 from the parochial school and 22 who appeared separately as members of the County 4-H clubs, from High street to the square where they passed before Governor Duff and his official party for review.

Carry Flags, Flowers

The children carried American flags and flowers. Most of the girls and many of the boys were dressed in white. All of the girls marching in the parochial school contingent wore blue hair ribbons. Dr. Lloyd C. Keefe

There were also the usual gaily decorated bicycles.

The parade formed at the playground, and disbanded at Mt. Carmel cemetery, where the following program was held: Welcome address, Francis J. Will, commander, Ocker-Snyder Legion Post; invocation, Rev. David S. Kammerer, pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran church; prayer, Rev. Frank E. Reynolds, pastor of Redeemer's Reformed church; selection, Littlestown high school band; address, Claude O. Meckley, Hanover postmaster; taps; benediction, Rev. John C. ## Here And There News Collected At Random

One of George Washington's most famous statements was this: "To be prepared for war is one of the most effectual ways of preserving peace."

That should be remembered in the present troubled world. And it has an especial significance now that an aggressive effort is being made to build up the National Guard to its authorized strength of 682,000 men.

The Guard is a volunteer, civilian-soldier organization, and it has a long and distinguished record of service. It provides a priceless nucleus of trained men

Abraham Lincoln's prophetic words, "The world will little note, nor long remember, what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here," echoed again Friday afternoon across the silent graves of the hundreds of heroes who lie buried in the National Cemetery, as Gettysburg led the state and nation in the observance of Memorial Day.

In a setting of beauty, under a cloudless sky, plain citizens joined with officials of high rank in state and nation to honor the men who gave their lives in the nation's conflicts. A crowd estimated at 3,500 stood with bared heads as 500 public and parochial school children of Gettysburg strewed flowers on the graves, and the GAR memorial service was read by Harry G. Deatrick, of the Gettysburg Camp No. 112, Sons of Union Veterans, and William L. Meals, secretary of the committee.

Taps Sounded

They heard Pennsylvania's Governor James H. Duff, United States Senator Francis J. Myers, and Congressman Chester H. Gross add their words of eulogy to those who, through the country's history, have paid with their lives that this nation might survive. Overhead an airplane dipped its wings in salute. The liquid notes of a bugle sounded across the graves as Master Sgt. William L. Baldwin, chief trumpeter, Pennsylvania Brigade, Sons of Union Veterans, sounded taps.

George H. Moore, York, Pennsylvania department commander of the Sons of Union Veterans, placed a wreath on the grave of one of the unknown soldiers who died during the battle here and lies buried in the National Cemetery.

Guard of Honor

As the Memorial Day parade entered the National Cemetery, the long column of school children wended its way to the left as two companies of the 772nd military police, Co. A from Carlisle and Co. B from Ft. Meade turned to the right and stood as a guard of honor for Governor Duff and other notables, who watched the strewing of the flowers from their cars.

As the school children approached the automobiles, Governor Duff and Senator Myers alighted and stood with the children as photographers snapped their pictures.

A column of mounted state police led the governor and other officials to the cemetery. Veterans' organizations and Boy and Girl Scout troops also lined the drive, and the Gettysburg high school band played "Safe in the Arms of Jesus" for this colorful and touching ceremony.

Gross Presents Myers

Proceeding to the rostrum, Congressman Gross opened the program there with the introduction of Senator Myers, the afternoon's master of ceremonies.

"Speaking for the Sons of Union Veterans, I want to assure you that I am glad to see so many of you here in Gettysburg, the nation's greatest historical shrine," Congressman Gross said. "If we close our eyes, we can see, passing before us, the spirits of those heroes of 1776 and 1812, the valiant heroes of San Juan hill behind their great leader, Theodore Roosevelt, the men who fought here, the soldiers of World War I and the thousands who sleep in graves scattered around the world in the last great conflict."

"The shooting war is over, but the wounds are not bound, and they heal slowly," Congressman Gross added. "These are days which call

NO MISHAPS ON MEMORIAL DAY

Despite the unusually heavy traffic late Thursday and throughout the day Friday, Memorial Day, not a single accident was reported, either to state or borough police.

State police of the Gettysburg sub-station said charges would be filed against several motorists for violations May 29 and 30. Two were arrested and fined. Frank Harris, Harrisburg, arrested Thursday for having no operator license, paid a fine of $10 and costs to Justice of the Peace Walter Wolf, York Springs, and Willis Monty, Silver Spring, Md., charged with driving to the left side of the highway, paid a similar fine and costs to the same square.

Ten-day notices will be sent by various justices to the following: William F. Skinkis, Swissvale, Pa., passing at the crest of a grade; Wilmer Kessler, Hanover, passing at the crest of a grade; Ellen Burkhardt, Chambersburg, no operator license, and Irvin Leon Shearer, Jacobus, Pa., John E. ## Air Liner

United States had known. The plane last night came in low over the hills around this northern Maryland community about 6:30 p. m. (EDT), winged over and plummeted into a forest a short distance from the Susquehanna river.

"It went right smack into the woods," reported J. G. Higgins of Baltimore who was driving along a nearby highway. "Then there was a terrific sheet of flame, followed by a thick cloud of black smoke. Then there was a wisp of white smoke."

Eyewitnesses at Bainbridge and Port Deposit reported seeing the DC-4 passing over a few minutes before the crash. Although it was flying low, they said, and engines were roaring, the plane did not appear to be in trouble.

Shook Buildings for Miles
The explosions which followed the crash shook buildings four miles away. The fire burned for three hours and prevented rescuers from approaching the main section of the ship.

Large trees were mowed down and small parts of the plane were hurled through the underbrush for dozens of yards. The tail assembly was far removed from the engines.

Clothing and sections of the plane dangled from trees all around the tiny valley where the plane struck.

Hastily assembled rescue and fire fighting crews reached the burning wreckage within half an hour but it was evident from the first that there could be no survivors.

Accounts Differ
The stories of witnesses differed as to what actually happened just before the disaster, but most agreed that the transport suddenly winged over and headed for the earth.

The scene of the wreck was in the area known as Whittaker's Barrens, a short distance from the Susquehanna river.

Police, soldiers and sailors first had to hack paths through the underbrush to reach the plane. Then they began widening the paths into roads so that the bodies could be brought out after daylight.

CAB Officials See Tragedy
The catastrophe was witnessed from the air by two Civil Aeronautics Board officials who today were among those investigating the cause—as yet unknown. The CAB said it probably was the first time that a major airline crash has been witnessed by two men who regulate the safety of air operations.

Dr. Robert C. Dodson, Cecil county medical examiner who labored through the night with navy corpsmen and civilian volunteers, said: "Not a single one of the victims can be identified. They are all burned or mutilated beyond recognition."

At midnight the searchers had located 35 bodies, reverently placed them in a small opening in the woods and covered them with sheets. Two mobile army spotlights illuminated the tiny valley where the DC-4 had cut a path of horror through a stand of sturdy eight-inch trees.

Rescue workers said the bodies of three children were found in the wreckage.

Debris Widely Scattered
Early arrivals at the scene, many of them momentarily overcome by the sight of dismembered bodies, crumpled segments of plane, and clothing strewn pitifully from tree branches, said the debris was scattered for hundreds of yards.

Piloting the DC-4, which left Newark at 4:55 p. m., and was last reported by the Philadelphia control tower at 6:27 p. m., was 40-year-old William E. Coney of Miami, who during the war was commander of the navy's famous Mars flying boat.

K. V. Willingham of Miami was co-pilot, Theodore Lindstrom of Newark, was purser, and Helena M. O'Brien of Newark was the stewardess.

A body, believed to be that of Captain Coney, was found clutching a piece of metal which state troopers said "probably" was the throttle handle.

Rich submarine coal fields have been discovered off Japan's Kyushu Island.

FACTS ABOUT COMMON INSECTS

It is, of course, necessary to know who your enemy is before you can estimate his strength. This is as true with insect pests as it is in military matters. Below are mentioned several misleading clues commonly found in garden ravages, along with a few brief remedial measures.

Often the gardener finds his potatoes, carrots, radishes or other so-called root crops or even the roots of food and ornamental plants gnawed and otherwise damaged. It is easy to blame such depredations on a certain insect when any of several may be the culprits. For example, the wireworm often burrows into fleshy rooted plants, and such tubers as potatoes, sweet potatoes and dahlias. The white grub is another pest causing similar damages.

Sowbugs, often called pillbugs, inflict the same type of injury. Millipedes, usually known as "thousand-leggers," belong to the same group of underground-feeding foes. The seed-corn maggot burrows into newly planted seeds. The cabbage maggot gnaws into the main roots and stem base of cabbage and related plants. Larvae (the young grubs) of the striped cucumber beetle feed on the main roots and stem bases at the soil line of cucumber, squash, melon and other cucurbit plants. Larvae of the carrot root fly may feed on the fibrous roots and burrow into the fleshy part of the carrot. The potato tuber worm often tunnels into the plant stems and tubers. These are not all, but the main members, of a large group of insects working in the underground parts of plants.

Ants rarely feed on plants of any kind. Yet they are blamed with multiplied crimes because they frequently visit plants to feed on honeydew secreted by plant lice or on plant sap oozing from stem wounds, or in some cases by fermenting sap where rots occur. When ants are seen on peonies, for an example, they are there mainly to obtain the honeydew of peony aphids. In such a case, extermination of the aphids will cause the ants to depart. Often ants are seen on cabbage where the plants are infected with black-rot. In fact, some ants actually carry aphid eggs to their nest and after the aphids hatch they transport the insect to a suitable plant and protect it there in return for the honeydew the aphids secrete.

A similar error, although not included among insect facts, is the common habit of blaming the ravages of ground mice on moles. Every week in late spring and summer the editor receives letters from readers, complaining that moles have damaged tulip bulbs. In every instance, of course, a mole burrow was found under the tulip bed. But moles seldom damage plants in any manner. The gnawed bulbs and roots are left by ground mice which follow along the burrows the mole makes.

These observations are intended to stress the importance of gardeners and farmers investigating closely each crime detected among crops. There are scores of enemies present. Damages by one may easily be blamed on another. But before a satisfactory method of control can be devised, it is necessary to identify the criminal positively. Usually this is possible, either by careful observation of the damages done or by finding the culprit himself near the scene of his crime. There are means of control or prevention for almost all plant enemies, but of course, it is urgently important to identify the perpetrator first. Herein is the need for every gardener and farmer to be an insect detective.

YANKEES LOSE DOUBLEHEADER TO ATHLETICS

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Long-suffering Connie Mack clubs are dusting off their charters and rounding up forgotten brethren to celebrate the Philadelphia A's spurt into the thin air of fifth place in the American league.

Dick Fowler and Freshman Joe Coleman teamed up on the Yanks yesterday in one of the eight doubleheaders that attracted a banner turn out of 283,530 fans. Fowler nosed out Spud Chandler, 1-0, in the opener although the A's touched Chandler for only three hits. Coleman gave up nine hits in the second win, 4-0 stretching New York's scoreless inning string to 21. It was a first win for Coleman, who prepped at Toronto.

Detroit muffed a chance to lengthen its lead considerably by splitting with St. Louis. After Hal Newhouse defeated the Browns for the 14th straight time over a three-year stretch, 2-1. The Tigers succumbed to Nels Potter's wiles in the finale, 8-3.

Senators Win Pair
Cleveland slid into second place by thumping Chicago twice, 8-4 in a slugfest and 9-1. The venerable Mel Harder started his 20th season with a five hitter in the second game, win No. 218 of his career.

The Boston Red Sox spent an unhappy holiday in Washington losing two games to the Senators who routed Tex Hughson 13-6, and eked out a 5-3 nod over Joe Dobson in the finale. Sid Hudson and Mickey Haefer were the Washington victors with the help of six Sox errors.

National league activities again were highlighted by the Giants who swept two from the Philadelphia Phils, 7-1 and 5-3, to take a one-game lead in the tight race.

Dodgers Run Fourth
Warren Spahn preserved his unbeaten string, adding an eighth straight for Boston in their 6-3 first game success over Brooklyn. The Braves also took the second half, 3-0. The double win boosted Boston into a second-place tie with Chicago and the two setbacks damped the Dodgers into fourth place. Earl Torgeson, Boston first baseman, tied an all-time record by playing the first game without a putout.

Hank Borowy got Chicago even for the day by copping his fifth in a row in the nightcap over Pittsburgh, 5-2, after Billy Cox's 10th inning homer had given Preacher Roth and the Pirates a first game 2-1 edge over Paul Erickson.

The St. Louis Cardinals failed to climb out of the cellar, splitting two with Cincinnati. After the Reds hopped on four Card hurlers for 15 hits to hand Ken Burkhardt a third loss, in the opener, 12-8, St. Louis came back, behind Al Brazle, to defeat Lefty Kent Peterson, 7-3.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

New York, May 31 (AP)—Scouting report: When Willard Nixon, 19-year-old freshman, pitched the Auburn baseball team to a 3-0 victory over Georgia recently, he personally accounted for 20 of the 27 putouts. Willard fanned ten, threw out nine and covered first on one putout. . . . At the last report six major league scouts were on his trail. . . . Ray Fisher, Michigan coach, believes another 19-year-old freshman, Bob Fancett, is the best major league prospect he has handled in 27 seasons of coaching. Bob's fast ball not only scares opposing hitters, but it scares Bob, too, since he smacked down a couple of batsmen. . . . The Virginia Tech had an infield this spring that completed ten double plays and a triple killing in 17 games and an outfielder, Dave Poole, who hit .446. . . . A few miles from there, 17-year-old Bill Ramsey, catcher for Jefferson high at Roanoke, Va., hit .613 this spring. . . . And at Rochester, N. Y., Southpaw Johnny Antonelli of Jefferson high struck out 57 batters in four games, 17 in a seven-inning no-hitter. . . . What team did the guy Jefferson play for?

TURNABOUT

Curly Lambeau, who heckled opposing pro football coaches for years just by sending in Don Hutson to catch passes, now is wondering what his colleagues will do about the Los Angeles Rams. . . . Curly explains: "They've had to play two men on Jim Benton to keep him from catching them all over the lot. They had to do the same thing with Steve Bagarus when he was with Washington. . . . Now Benton and Bagarus are on the same club and there aren't enough men in the defense to go around."

HOME ON THE RANGE

When Joe Tepsic, former Penn State athlete who wanted to play ball for Brooklyn or nobody, finally reported to the Fort Worth Cats the other day, one of the first guys he encountered was Teddy Nickels, who hails from the same town, Slovan, Pa. . . . Ted plays basketball for Texas Wesleyan college at Fort Worth.

Arendtsville took a close 2-1 decision from Hanover in the morning at Arendtsville and laced Littletown 11-5 in the afternoon at Littletown. However, New Oxford scored a pair of runs in the opening inning to beat him 2-1 in the afternoon tilt at New Oxford.

Hanover blanked McSherrystown 5-0 at McSherrystown in the afternoon and Emmitsburg gained an 8-3 victory at Fairfield.

The Fairfield-Gettysburg tilt listed for here Friday morning was called off due to wet grounds. The McSherrystown-Emmitsburg game scheduled for the morning at Emmitsburg was postponed due to Memorial Day services.

TEN YEARS AGO

Rev. Coffelt, 8 Years Fairfield Pastor, Resigns: The Rev. Charles M. Coffelt, serving his eighth year as pastor of Zion Lutheran church of Fairfield, presented his resignation Sunday morning. The Rev. Mr. Coffelt stated that he is moving from Fairfield to a farm in Highland township.

Purchase Farm: John C. Knorr, of Bassano, Alberta, Canada, has purchased the 170-acre farm of the John C. Derr estate in Highland township. The sale was made through C. A. Heiges, Buford avenue.

Mayor of Philadelphia Speaks Here: The address of S. Davis Wilson, urging the United States to end the crisis due to unemployment, climaxed the exercises at the rotunda in the National Cemetery, where Congressman Harry L. Putman pronounced the benediction.

Mass and Pageant Feature Centenary: A crowd of people estimated at from 7,000 to 10,000 gathered at Conewago chapel to celebrate the sesqui-centennial of the first church in North America dedicated to the Sacred Heart of Jesus.

One of the most impressive features of the morning's program was the singing of the Pontifical Mass by a choir of over 3,000 school children, augmented by the priests' choir of the diocese, under the direction of Father Leo Krichten, diocesan director of music.

This afternoon a pageant, "Conewago—Gateway of the Faith," was presented by the high schools of the diocese of Harrisburg.

Today's Talk

DIVINE DISCONTENT

No one should get discouraged over being discontented. Discontentment is a sign of growing pains, both mental and spiritual. Few, if any of us, are content with ourselves or with the work that we do, so that to be discontented is an omen of hope.

Discontentment has been the turning point in thousands of lives. A turning about. A decision to get out of a rut, and to get upon a good main road. It is all right to stay in one place for a long time if you can keep making that place a bigger one, but there are too many who make their place a smaller one—and shrink in it!

Discontent has inspired many a good worker in an uninteresting job to leave it and take upon himself the responsibilities of a difficult one, there to grow and to expand both himself and his job. Discontent with old methods is what gives us all the new ones. It keeps inventors and thinkers busy!

It is discontent with dishonesty and bad government that gives us honest and progressive government. We can self-examine ourselves, and if we do it in an honest fashion, good is sure to come from it. Many a one has become even disgusted with himself, only to be born anew! Often the process is a radical one, but if it concludes with an awakening, then it is well worth the experience.

Change is a wholesome thing in many cases. We get bored with ourselves and with the work that we do, so that to start on a new track is like sweeping out a room with a new broom. All of us need a mind and heart sweeping out at times to keep both clean and healthy. And it is the discontent with what we do and are that drives us to change.

Of course it takes both courage and character to attempt new trails and to divorce oneself from former tasks and habits, but in the end it may make all the difference in the world. Like taking the "less traveled road," as Robert Frost wrote in one of his inspiring poems.

Never worry, or be disturbed about becoming discontented. It's a fresh fire being started within you, and you would be wise to give it plenty of fuel!

Just Folks

By EDGAR A. GUEST
The Poet of the People

FRIEND IN NEED
I didn't ask him how he prayed
Or was he black or white.
I only knew that he had stayed
To share my little plight.

I only knew while passing by
He did a friendly deed,
And grateful at the time was I
To find a friend in need.

I didn't ask him to declare His old ancestral line.
I only knew he'd stopped to share
A pressing need of mine.

I thanked him as he left me there,
Once more from trouble free,
Most grateful that my time of care
Had brought a friend to me.

Wise motorists learn by others' mistakes; fools by their own.

Give It Time

When having a new muffler installed don't be disappointed if the exhaust seems a bit sharp for awhile. It doesn't mean that the mechanic hasn't done a good job or that the muffler is the wrong type for the car, but simply that there is some escape of gas vapors around the front and rear of the muffler where it joins exhaust and tail pipes respectively. Until some carbon crams into these units by way of a seal the exhaust will be a little more in evidence than it normally would.

What of the Brakes?

How long is it since you have taken a look at the brake linings?

If they are badly worn the chances are that their rivets are scratching the highly polished surface of the drums. Scored drums should be cut down immediately. Unfortunately this makes drums thinner, rendering them more liable to re-warpage. But there is no other alternative, if you do not want to invest in new drums.

Don't be disappointed if the brakes do not seem to hold as well right after a brake reline and a truing of the drums. Those scratches in the drums actually increased braking area. There was a lot of brake dust in the drums. This increased friction. As fresh "dust" accumulates the brakes will improve in effectiveness. It is just as well that they are not too severe, for the thinner drums are more apt to warp. Avoid short, quick stops. They are tough on drums, and tire treads.

Are you really keen about driving a car? Do you get a kick out of being at the wheel? Or do you just take it as a matter of course? I'd like to know how you feel about it. The facts might even be useful to the car industry. What brought it to my mind is the fact that Bob Brightman, one of the editors of Mechanix Illustrated magazine, likes driving so well he won't have a radio in his car because it detracts from his motoring pleasure. He told me the other day that when he was going through college he picked up spare change in summertime by driving a taxi in New York. Yes, you guessed it. On his days off he used to drive to Philadelphia!

Mechanic Joe Speaking:
"Symptoms are helpful in diagnosing car trouble but don't be too dependent on them. They may be fooling you. Note this in connection with the brakes."

"If you have to pump twice on the pedal in order to get a good stop the indications are that there is leakage in the hydraulic lines, fluid leaking out or air leaking in. Pumping builds up pressure. Leakage seemed to be the story in a case I tackled yesterday, but examination revealed that the brake linings were badly worn. After a relining the pedal action was normal again. No leakage could be found."

Watch Those Front Wheels
Balancing of wheels may seem like a frill, but actually it is a big saver of tires. Seven ounces of weights were required to counterbalance the unbalance of one of the front-tire combinations of a typical car. If a front wheel is out of balance by just one ounce (using a 16-inch diameter wheel for the test) the amount of force will reach 12 pounds at 25 miles per hour, 2.5 pounds at 35 and 6 pounds at 55. Well below the shimmy point the wheel actually tramps and pivots enough to cause spotty wear directly opposite the point of unbalance.

Where Skill Counts

Wheels seldom are out of balance at just one point. Service men check for static unbalance first, then dynamic. The latter means the amount of unbalance when the wheel is in motion. Weights have to be affixed to the rim at various points to bring the whole unit into smooth rotation. Be sure, however, that your man knows his stuff. The unskilled at balancing may wind up by trying to add balance weights to counterbalance the weights they have incorrectly added. If you see too many balance weights on a wheel you are justified in suspecting that the repairman didn't take time to simplify the job. Experienced men, if confused, take off all the weights and start over again. Like Mark Twain they realize that it takes time to write a short letter.

Thought On Carkeeping

After a car wash you may be discouraged to find some of the flat surfaces looking a bit scratched. But a normal polishing will remove these. Use a lacquer polish that doesn't contain wax, and then when the surface is bright and free of scratches, follow with a waxing. Sometimes if a body is heavily waxed the chamois used for the drying the car will leave what appear to be scratches. Best way to remove these marks is to rub the surface with one of the special polishing cloths which is lightly impregnated with wax.

Are you one of those who still believe that it pays to continue using permanent type anti-freeze all summer just because it has a boiling point higher than water and thus would lessen the annoyance of overheating? If so, better drain and discard this anti-freeze now. What you are doing is to use the same water all year round, and you must know that the coolant (any kind) becomes contaminated with gases which leak past the head gasket. When acid the coolant then tends to eat into the gasket. Later there will be trouble if you continue using the same coolant all the time. Oh yes, I know some people who have used the same coolant year after year without paying the penalty. They're in the same category with folk who have driven fast for years without hitting anyfauser, superintendent of the Gettysburg public schools, headed the group of school teachers and mothers who marched with the youngsters in the long walk to the cemetery.

Parade

William and Charles Jacobs were the aides in charge of the second contingent of the parade which was headed by the 42-piece Blue and Gray band of Gettysburg.

Following were two platoons of a company of Military Police of the 772nd Regiment, Company A.

The military police were dressed in Class B uniform, suttans open at the neck, and with shiny lacquered helmet liners. With arms slung and with bayonets fixed the men marched with full field pack.

Color Guard

Next was the color guard of the county contingent of the state guard followed by a jeep containing Captain C. Arthur Brame, commanding officer of the troop. Members of the troop were in armored cars which wound slowly along with the vehicles staggered along the route of march. They were followed by the members of the new National Guard unit here, also in armored cars and led by Captain Robert L. Scott.

A color guard of the United Spanish War Veterans, headed by Commander John Zimmerman, was next. A number of Spanish American War veterans followed in cars.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars post of Gettysburg was represented by a color guard and a contingent of World War II and World War I men in uniform. Following them were several soldiers in cars and then came the new drum corps of the Albert J. Lentz post of the American Legion making its first public appearance. The Legion color guard followed and after that were members of the Lentz post in uniform.

200 Girl Scouts

Next were the color guard and members of the Dorsey-Stanton post of the American Legion of Gettysburg after which were the Girl Scouts. More than 200 Girl Scouts were massed, including the Senior Service Scouts. The Girl Scouts were from Gettysburg and New Oxford. The colors of the various troops were massed at the head of the contingent.

The Y-Teens followed the Girl Scouts.

Over 200 Boy Scouts were also in the line of march. The drum corps of Troop 79 headed by Scoutmaster William Weikert led the scouts. The youngsters, drew much applause as they counter-marched from time to time when the parade halted to permit outfits ahead to move on.

Among the troops represented in the parade were Boy Scout Troops

$250,000 FIRE RAGES 4 HOURS AT MUHLENBERG

Allentown, Pa., May 31 (AP) — A $250,000 fire that damaged the 43-year-old three-story administration building of Muhlenberg college was brought under control at 1:30 a. m. (EST) today, four hours after the first alarm.

The blaze was discovered in the bell tower by nightwatchman Elmer Frey and almost simultaneously by Howard MacGregor, college treasurer, who was working in a first-floor office.

During the height of the blaze the cupola collapsed with a roar. Edmund Keiter, business manager of the college, estimated the loss at $250,000, including damage to the building and contents.

Alumni Help
Before firemen arrived, alumni and students banded together in a volunteer army of about 150 persons to salvage records and equipment. Alumni were here for a reunion.

Among the contents salvaged were 110 diplomas that will be presented the class of graduates at commencement exercises Monday.

Two students were overcome by smoke. Leslie Wagner, address unavailable, was treated at Allentown hospital, and John Rodgers, of Philadelphia, was treated at an emergency first-aid station established at President Leavitt Tyson's campus home. Mrs. Tyson sprained her wrist when she fell over a hose.

President Tyson announced all events scheduled for the alumni week-end as well as commencement exercises would be held as planned and that summer classes for approximately 500 students would open June 9.

Temporary offices will be established in the college library, he added.

Records Saved
The administration building housed all college offices, the alumni office and class rooms for the foreign language department, the department of religion and the social studies departments. The athletic offices were located in the basement.

President Tyson said that "as far as can be learned" all valuable records were saved. The volunteers carried 150 filing cases containing business, academic and alumni records from the building.

Alumni were enjoying a reunion party at the Hotel Traylor when informed of the fire and promptly responded to the call for help, President Tyson said. Only about 75 students were on the campus.

Week-end events scheduled at the college include baccalaureate services tomorrow and commencement exercises Monday. Besides awarding diplomas to its 110 graduates, the college will confer nine honorary degrees.

Chapter 11
Kit found Pedrick at his apartment. He agreed to meet them at Carlo's in an hour for a drink.

Rush drove Kit's car to Carlo's and parked in the lot reserved for customers. Inside they found a table and Pedrick slipped into the booth before the drinks had come.

"Well, let's have it," he said. "What happened to Sully?"

Rush described the exodus of the Sully entourage. "I don't know whose," he said, "but I got the impression that somebody's joint got wrecked."

Pedrick shook his head. "I doubt it," he said. "It doesn't make sense. Nobody'd have any reason to wreck any joint in this town. It's too well organized."

Nevertheless, he left to make a phone call.

"They wrecked it, all right," he said when he returned.

"Sully's?" asked Kit.

Pedrick nodded his head. "Sully's," he said. "But good, if my contact hit it straight." He downed his drink.

"Do you want to go over there?"

"Wouldn't it be more interesting to interview the competition?" asked Rush.

"Not a bad idea," said Matt, "especially since he just came into the room." He raised a hand to wave at a figure standing in the doorway. Max Carney came across the room and slipped into the booth beside Pedrick.

"What do you think, Max?" asked Pedrick.

"I'll be damned if I know. If this were for publication I'd say that it was an act of vandals. But it isn't that at all. I just came from Sully's. Whoever did that wanted the place wrecked. He had a reason, and if you can figure the reason I'll give you a piece of this joint."

Rush swallowed his drink and looked up at Carney. "If you ask me to muscle in, it has all the earmarks. One of the boys gets shot. Another boy gets his joint messed up. That's the way it happens in Chicago. It looks very much like a muscle."

Carney looked at him disbelievingly.

"In this town?" he asked. "Look, you're grown up. Let me give you one of the facts of life in Forge City. We're so well organized here that Capone and his torpedoes couldn't muscle in with the help of the fifth air force. Forget it."

"Those are mighty fine trees," said Rush, "but take a look at the forest. You're organized but good. But for how long? How long do you think citizens in a town the size of Forge City are going to sit still if you get noisy. The way I hear it is that they keep the mayor and his chief of police commissioner in because they keep the town quiet. No crime, no shootings, no nothing. What'll they do if they find a nice loud gang war in their laps?"

"That's a lot of hop," Carney said. "Anybody big enough to muscle in wouldn't be interested in Forge City."

Rush knew that Carney believed that now. But the germs were well planted. Later he'd remember and think about it again.

Carney left them.

They drank up then and Rush drove Kit home in her car. Pedrick followed and picked him up to take him to the hotel.

The room door swung away from his probing key. He straightened and found himself staring across eighteen inches of space into what he could only describe as a gorilla.

"Come in, Mr. Henry," the mug said.

"It's nice of you to ask me in," Rush stepped around the mug and walked into his room. Seated in a chair was a slightly refined counterpart of the mug.

"Shut the door, Junior," said the one in the chair. The door was shut.

"You Rush Henry?" the man in the chair asked.

Rush nodded.

"We got a word for you, buddy. You been in town too long. Why don't you leave?"

"But, I like it here," said Rush.

"You won't." It was a statement of accepted fact.

"You got no business here, I'm telling you, get out. If you ain't gone in twenty-four hours it'll be just too bad."

"What'll be just too bad?" asked Rush.

"Maybe we better give you an idea. Take him, Junior."

"Stand right there a minute, Junior," said Rush. The tone of his voice stopped Junior after one step.

"Look, you imitation tough guys. I don't want to lose my temper. I don't want to break your hearts by sending you back to your boss all mused up, so blow. Get out. Scram. The door is right over there."

"Take him, Junior," said the man in the chair.

Junior took one step Rush sighted. Junior took another step. He reached out a hamlike paw for Rush. Rush caught it by the wrist, twisted, came under it, pulled the elbow to his shoulder and threw his weight forward, hard. Junior came forward in a flying arc. He lit in a bundle in the lap of the man in the chair. The chair collapsed and they made a writhing heap in the middle of the floor. Rush picked up a leg of the chair which splintered off at his feet. With it he prodded Junior.

"Get up, Junior," he said.

Junior showed fight for as long as it took Rush to slug him alongside the temple with the chair leg. He rolled him off the man who had been in the chair and issued directions.

"Get some water and wake that ape up. Get him out of here. And when you get back to whoever sent you tell him you're playing with the older boys now."

There was a package from Chicago for him at the desk in the morning and he opened it in his room after breakfast. He leered at its contents for a moment and decided the time was ripe to talk to Bill Prime again. His suspicion campaign could use the facilities of the press.

He then dialed the number of Sully's. He put a handkerchief over the mouthpiece of the phone and spoke only a few odd sentences to the voice that answered.

"Tell Sully that if he's smart he'll have a couple of guys at Carlo's to-night. He'll want to know what goes on there."

Chapter 12

Rush stopped by Gay's apartment at nine. He had kept his cab and it took them to Carlo's. The waiter took them to the table Rush had reserved that afternoon. Across the room Matt Pedrick waved at them. At his side Kit English looked up and nodded without too much enthusiasm. Rush took Gay to the dance floor. After the dance they returned to the table to find Pedrick waiting for them.

"Evening, children," he said. "Is this an item or are you two just doing research for Mr. Henry's articles?"

"Oh, please don't put it in your paper, Mr. Pedrick," begged Gay.

"Mr. Henry's wife and five children would just die."

"My," said Pedrick looking at Rush, "prolific, isn't he? Didn't know you were a family man."

"I'm not. At least I wasn't."

Pedrick turned to look at Gay.

"Well, he acts like a father to me. You can't blame me for being fooled."

Pedrick opened his mouth to laugh aloud and suddenly closed it.

"What came in?" asked Rush.

Pedrick spoke to Rush but his eyes followed two men around the edge of the room to the bar.

"A couple of guys who never come in here. Card Sully's two right hand men. Of course, Sully's place is out of order at the moment. Maybe they're just relaxing. On vacation as it were and seeing what the other boys are doing."

"This is all very interesting," said Rush. "I have a call to make."

He followed the path toward the bar taken by the two men who had so interested Pedrick. He seemed in no hurry. In fact he stopped almost dead still several times. Each time he reached in his pocket and did something to a small object he held in his two hands. Then he dropped it to the floor only to hurry on several yards and repeat the performance. He stopped at the bar and returned to the table.

A murmur started on the far side of the room. It grew and with the murmur came the noise of chairs being shoved back from the tables, and angry voices. A door beside the bar opened and a tall dark man with broad shoulders came out. He looked in the direction of the disturbance, then moved purposefully toward the center of it.

Pedrick sniffed. He breathed in deeply. Rush sniffed. Gay sniffed. Something was dead. Either that or an army of skunks had visited Carlo's. The smell caught in the air conditioning and spread around the room. It was overpowering.

"I'm a son of a monkey," said Pedrick, "a stink bomb. I wonder —" He stopped in mid sentence.

"This is news," he said. "Be seeing you."

Rush looked back at the mob struggling to get out and in its midst saw one figure struggling to get in. It was Carney.

He broke away from the mass and stalked angrily across the floor to the three men at the bar. Then from the crowd came another late entry. Card Sully broke through the crowd and came across the room to stand beside Carney. That was all Rush wanted to see. He took Gay by one arm and led her to the now thinning crowd at the exit.

They finally maneuvered a cab out of the line in front of the night club and opened all the windows. The wind blew away all vestiges of the smell before they reached Gay's apartment.

Gay opened the door and walked ahead of Rush into the living room. She allowed him to take off her wrap and turned to face him.

"I'm an understanding woman, Henry," she said. "I know you have business to do. I don't know what the hell you're up to, but you're up to something and it obviously takes time. But some time you're going to have to spend some time with me alone and you know it. So make your plans. Now ply me with that drink."

Rush poured drinks and they drank in silence. Then Rush stood up.

"Come here," he said.

She came and stood in front of him.

"Look," he said, "I'm very glad you are an understanding woman. I am up to something and it takes time."

And sometime I'm going to spend some time with you alone. My plans not ask questions. Let us eat, drink are all made. In the meantime let's and be merry or a reasonable facsimile of the same."

"Roger," she said.

He put his hands on her shoulders then and pulled her to him. It was as before. Passion without urgency. Peace with a promise of ecstasy. And the softest lips within memory.

Rush left then with no backward glance and walked through the dim hall to the entranceway. There he stopped to look at a figure he had penciled on the back of an old envelope.

In the street he walked four blocks north, three west and a half north again. There he found a sheltering clump of bushes and crouched behind them, his eyes on the entrance of a large new house standing some fifty feet back from the street. Once he took a gun from his pocket and examined the load.

Soon an automobile turned the corner south of him and swept up to stop beside the house Rush had watched. A man stepped out. The car gathered momentum in a rush and was a half block away by the time the man was halfway to the house.

Rush stood up behind the bushes and pointed his gun at the man. He pulled the trigger three times in fast succession and turned and ran with all his might.

In his room he grinned at his reflection in the mirror. He thought that suspicion should really be rife now. Card Sully would look twice at anyone who might possibly have shot at him. Card Sully, of course, would never know that the shots had come from blank cartridges.

Rush sat on the edge of his bed and picked up the phone. He gave the operator a number in Chicago.

"Hello, Pappy," he said. "You'd better send Smoky. Tell Gertrude to send Mervin. Tell her to tell him to mind Smoky till he gets here. Also I'd like one other. Ask Jim Todd at Continental if he can let me have Duffy for a few days. He's worked for me before. Better have them fly. I can use them right away."

upon which an effective fighting force can be built in time of war.

Units of the Guard were among the first to see action in the last conflict, and they fought gallant delaying actions while we worked against time to create a gigantic

Army. And war is not the only emergency which the Guard is called upon to meet. In every great disaster, from the San-Francisco fire of 1906 to the ghastly explosion at Texas City a short time ago, the Guard has done a superb job as a protector of life and property.

To young men, the Guard offers an opportunity to learn new skills, to improve old ones, and to acquire experience in organization and leadership. Each us concerning the Evangelistic helped to bring this about." Coffman Shenk, for Bethel for courage and foresight and fortitude."

Congressman Gross said he brought with him the regrets of Senator Edward Martin, former governor of Pennsylvania, who was unable to be present. He then presented Senator Myers.

Truman Sends Regrets
"It is good to be in Gettysburg and participate with you in these events of Memorial Day," Senator Myers said. He then expressed his own and President Truman's regrets at the inability of the President to attend.

"I am sure everyone here today regrets exceedingly, as I do, the fact that the President of the United States had to cancel his scheduled appearance at this solemn historic observance of Memorial Day.

"I know that President Truman wanted to come here, and I have been asked to express to you his great disappointment at being unable to attend. As you know, he cancelled the engagement when he rushed to the side of his mother in Independence, Mo., and, although her condition has fortunately improved sufficiently for him to feel able to return to Washington, the tremendous accumulation of official matters awaiting his attention there has made it impossible for him to come here.

"Our sympathies and our prayers rise from our hearts on behalf of that remarkable little lady in Independence who holds such a fierce and courageous will to live, and also on behalf of the man who, although the head of the greatest and most powerful nation in the world, remains first of all a good son to a fine mother.

Honor Soldier Dead
"Though he could not be here with us in person, the President joins us all today in our dedication to the principles of American freedom and of American unity. We honor our soldier dead today in this hallowed part of Pennsylvania where greatness—political greatness of such stature as to be held in awe by all who tread these paths.

"And while we reflect on the greatness which America and her people have shown in the past, here and elsewhere, in reiterating, with firm conviction, under the most trying of circumstances, the doctrines of our way of life, it is well, I think, to remember that the battle of Gettysburg and the war for political decency of which Gettysburg was a significant part, are still being fought wherever men are not free and wherever our concepts of political decency among men and among nations are not accorded the enthronement they deserve.

"Throughout large portions of the civilized world today, freedom among mankind is still a goal which remains to be achieved. Even in our own United States, birthplace of modern dynamic democracy in enduring form, there are large areas—areas of geography or areas of thought—in which the ideals of Abraham Lincoln and of the great Americans who preceded him and of those who followed him in the continuing war against tyranny and oppression are ideals which are denied outrightly or, if accorded lip service, are yet repudiated in action.

Lauds Pennsylvanians
"The good, solid Americanism of Pennsylvania and of Pennsylvanians, and particularly of this part of Pennsylvania where freedom has always had real and personal meaning and where anything but freedom would be intolerable to life itself, needs no prodding from me, I know.

"I am here not to prod, not to preach—for preaching is not needed here—but merely to join humbly with real Americans in an event which allows all America to share with you in paying honor to those to whom honor—our nation's honor—was dearer than life itself. We can honor them best here today as they have honored us, by honoring our American way of life."

After the playing of "America" by the Blue and Gray band of Gettysburg and the invocation by the Rev.
Howard S. Fox, pastor of Trinity Evangelical Reformed church, Lincoln's Gettysburg Address was read by a veteran of World War II, Lt. Donald P. McPherson, Jr., of Gettysburg. Governor Duff's Memorial Day address followed, and the benediction was pronounced by the Rev. Robert M. Hunt, pastor of the Presbyterian church, and a naval chaplain of World War II.
The band played the "Star Spangled Banner," and the exercises were over.

Tribute To Children
Senator Myers, in introducing Governor Duff said: "I present to you a splendid gentleman, and a great American." In his closing remarks, the senator paid a particular tribute to the school children who strewed flowers on the graves, and recalled the spirit of Abraham Lincoln, as he said:

"I am sure that Abraham Lincoln is looking down on us here today, and I am sure he saw, with a smile on his face, these little tots strewing their flowers over these heroes' graves.
I am sure he smiled as he heard the inspiring words of our governor's address, and I am sure that as he heard, his soul was still beating for us in these troublous times."

The entire program at the rostrum was broadcast, two radio stations

Holiday Toll In Nation Near 200

The nation entered the second day of the extended Memorial Day week-end holiday with a death toll of at least 189 persons as a result of accidents, with two airplane crashes accounting for more than half of the total.

The plane crashes in New York
Thursday night and at Port Deposit, Md., yesterday cost the lives of 93 persons, while other violent deaths of miscellaneous causes since Thursday evening boosted the total to 111.

The toll on the highway, normally the heaviest during a holiday period, was 53, while 25 persons lost their lives by drowning. The National Safety Council had estimated that 275 persons would be killed in motor mishaps over the three-day period.

Indiana led the nation in traffic fatalities with 10, including six members of a wedding party in a train-auto collision in Lake county.
The dead included the bride and groom, the bride's parents and her brother and sister.

at York. A public address system carried the speakers' words to the assembled throng.

Among the guests on the rostrum were Mrs. Duff and Mrs. Myers; Miss Emily Warren, Newport, R. I.,
daughter of General G. K. Warren, whose statue stands on Little Round Top, and who was chief engineer of the Union forces at the Battle of Gettysburg, and numerous other notables.

Mrs. Duff was presented with an emerald at the Hotel Gettysburg by Mrs. Joseph E. Cadori, president of the American Legion auxiliary, and Mrs. LeRoy H. Wineberger, representing the auxiliary of the Lentz post, American Legion, and they sat with her on the rostrum.

Flowers were presented to Mrs.
Myers, wife of the senator, and to Congressman Gross' daughter, by Miss Alice Snyder, Mrs. Luther Mc-Donnell and Mrs. Ruth Naugle, representing the auxiliary of the Sons of Union Veterans, who also occupied places on the rostrum with Mrs. Myers, and the latter's three children.

Col. C. M. Wilhelm, commissioner of state police, and Col. Tuttle, Carlisle Barracks, representing the Second Army, were also among the guests here for the occasion. Major Robert D. Hanson, Harrisburg, son of Dr. Henry W. A. Hanson, president of Gettysburg college, served as military aide to Governor Duff.
Major Hanson's parents were on the rostrum.

State police did an exceptionally fine job of handling the crowds, both on the streets and at the cemetery, and in handling the unusual amount of traffic occasioned by Memorial Day. Police details were in direct charge of Captain John Kime.

Among others here were Col. J. C.
Mauk, deputy commissioner of state police and Major Charles C. Keller, another state police officer. Keller was in charge of the state police headquarters on Hancock avenue, near the national museum, and supervised the state police activities here.

MONDAY, TUESDAY

"Love and Learn," co-starring Jack Carson, Robert Hutton, Martha Vickers and Janis Paige, is the new Warner Bros. film scheduled to begin an engagement at the Majestic theatre Monday. The picture, a whimsical story of two songwriters' struggle for recognition, tells the humorous tale of Jingles Collins (Jack Carson) and Bob Grant (Robert Hutton) and their involvement with a woman who lied her way into their hearts and into a great deal of laughable trouble for everyone concerned.

Based on an original story by Harry Sauber, the film presents two talented tunesmiths, Collins and Grant, who just haven't been able to get their music published. Bob becomes depressed and decides to return to Sperryville, Indiana. With Jingles' girl friend, Jackie Madden (Janis Paige), Bob and Jingles go to Danceland to celebrate Bob's last night in town. While at the dance hall they meet and become friendly with a Barbara "Smith" who in reality is Barbara Wyngate (Martha Vickers), daughter of tycoon Andrew Wyngate (Otto Kruger), merely posing as a hostess to break the monotony of her dull life.

WEDNESDAY, THURSDAY

Paramount's "Easy Come, Easy Go," a romantic comedy starring Barry Fitzgerald, Diana Lynn and Sonny Tufts, will open next Wednesday at the Majestic theatre.

The picture tells an hilarious story of life and love in a New York boarding house owned by Barry Fitzgerald, a conscienceless, lovable scoundrel, and run by his romantic daughter, Diana Lynn. Sonny Tufts plays the man Diana wants to marry, an event Fitzgerald tries to prevent by devious and laugh-packed methods.

The supporting cast features Dick Foran, Frank McHugh, Allen Jenkins and Frank Faylen.

FRIDAY, SATURDAY

Frank Sinatra who plays one of the top roles in "It Happened in Brooklyn."

Frank Sinatra, Kathryn Grayson, Peter Lawford and the inimitable Jimmy Durante are the stars of M-G-M's ingratiating new musical, "It Happened in Brooklyn," the attraction at the Majestic theatre Friday and Saturday.

Sinatra is the music publishing-house shipping clerk who is convinced that his home town of Brooklyn is the most wonderful place in the whole wide world. Miss Grayson is the girl who has turned to teaching when she is persuaded that her voice lacks the romantic warmth for grand opera. Lawford is the shy, English songwriter who has never heard of jive, in consequence of which his songs tend to turn him into the Funeral March King. And Durante has the time of his life in the role of an hospitable school janitor who takes them all under his wing and tempers their troubles with his sunny disposition.

COLLIE COMES HOME

Kansas City, (P)—A collie dog belonging to Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Hoskins was back home today after hitch-hiking from the Missouri-Iowa state line.

Mr. and Mrs. R. K. Bartness were returning from Ft. Dodge, Ia. The dog ran in front of their car, then jumped in when Bartness stopped the vehicle. When they arrived in Kansas City the dog, missing for six months, left the Bartness car and dashed to the Hoskins home across the street.

Mr. and Mrs. Bartness said they had never seen the dog before, having lived in the neighborhood only three months.

GASPERI HAS FORMED HIS 4TH CABINET

By JOHN P. MCKNIGHT

Rome, May 31 (P)—Premier Designate Alcide De Gasperi finished shaping up his fourth straight cabinet today and for the first time in three years Italy will have a government without any Socialist or Communist members.

The new cabinet, which was approved last night by President Enrico de Nicola, is composed solely of Christian Democrats and Independents. It awaits only to become official. De Gasperi said the names would be made public today and it was expected the new ministers would take the oath of office from the president tomorrow.

Included in the new ministry, sources close to De Gasperi said, are Carlo Sforza, 63-year-old diplomat, author, as foreign minister—a post he held in the outgoing cabinet—and Luigi Einaudi, governor of the bank of Italy, who was expected to receive a new cabinet post in which his responsibility would be to balance the Italian budget.

Precarious Position

Christian Democrat aides, conceding that De Gasperi's decision to freeze out the left placed him in a precarious position, maintained that he had no alternative.

When the Italian leader resigned as premier May 13, they said, he found the Christian Democrat-Communist-Socialist combine so constantly at cross purposes that it was unmanageable and inefficient. The government of national unity that he sought proved unattainable, and the small left-of-center parties had denied him their help, except on terms that would have hamstrung him.

Defer Sentence For Cop Slayer

Philadelphia, May 31 (P)—Sixteen-year-old Keith Donaldson of Elberon, N. J., has been convicted of second degree murder in the Christmas Eve slaying of Policeman Henry J. Hicks but Judge Louis E. Levinthal is deferring sentence pending defense counsel's filing a motion for a new trial.

The youth was found guilty by a jury of three men and nine women yesterday. Jurors deliberated 28 hours and 36 minutes before reaching their decision. Maximum penalty under the law is 10 to 20 years in prison.

Hicks was shot and beaten with his own gun and nightstick. Aaron Gore, Jr., 16, of Long Branch, N. J., pleaded guilty to murder and is serving a life sentence. Donaldson accompanied Gore and both youths testified Hicks stopped them after they had run away from their homes bound for Florida. They attacked him when he started to take them to a police station, both said.

EXPECT OLEO BILL TO PASS

Harrisburg, May 31 (P)—Speedy House approval of Senate-passed legislation continuing regulations on oleomargarine was predicted by House Republican leaders today.

Chairman Charles R. Reagan (R.-Union), said he anticipated the House agriculture committee, at a meeting Tuesday, will bring the measure to the House floor in position for final enactment next Thursday.

The measure, nursed through the Senate by its sponsor, Sen. Weldon B. Heyburn (R.-Delaware), despite bitter Democratic opposition, would require a $2 license fee from both wholesale and retail dealers as contrasted to $500 for wholesalers and $100 for retailers which were invalidated by the state Supreme Court several months ago.

In addition, the legislation would require labeling of margarine packages, require hotels, restaurants and boarding houses serving the product to indicate that on their menus and would require reports from both wholesale and retail dealers.

A ban on the addition of coloring before sale was part of the measure when it passed in the Senate Wednesday.

NEW PREMIER FOR HUNGARY IS ANNOUNCED

Budapest, May 31 (P)—The Hungarian cabinet announced today that Lajos Dinnyes, 46-year-old Minister of War, had been chosen premier to succeed Ferenc Nagy, who resigned two days ago while on vacation in Switzerland.

The cabinet also announced that Istvan Kertesz, recently named minister to Rome, had been appointed to replace Foreign Minister Janos Gyongyosi, whose pro-Western views have been opposed by left wing parties.

It said that new national elections would be held in September.

Reports circulated meanwhile, that the Communists, having forced Nagy from office, had turned the pressure on President Zoltan Tildy in continuation of what some informants said was a determined drive to turn Hungary into a police state.

Communist Threats

Appointment of Dinnyes to the premiership surprised parliamentary circles. Persons close to cabinet members said that up to this morning Imre Oltványi, former president of the National bank, had been the Communist choice for the post and therefore the most likely candidate.

The informants said Oltványi had been turned down at the last minute in Hungary. They declared that it was too early to learn the real reason for the Russian veto, but first reports in parliament were that it was because Oltványi was a SWAB (German) origin and had served in the intelligence section of the Hungarian army which fought the Russians.

A Presidential military aide said the Communists were threatening to compel Tildy to resign unless he bowed to their wishes. The President was reported to have acceded to Communist demands that he invite Imre Oltványi to become premier and form a new cabinet.

Santaquin, Utah, (P)—That buzzin' yesterday was bees—108 hives full which were liberated suddenly when the truck they were riding overturned.

Driver Joseph Yack of Neola, Utah, who was not injured, put his net hat on and quickly persuaded the insects to come home.

But before heading thee all, the swarms "buzzed" a couple cars and nearby homes.
